

Environment Institute Guest Blogger Information Sheet

The Environment Institute encourages our researchers to get involved. In 2012 The Environment Institute are looking for our members to get involved and share their research with the World, through contributing as a guest blogger on the Environment Institute Blog.

We have put together this information sheet, to make writing the post as simple as possible.

Content: The Blog post can contain information on your current/past research relating to topical issues in the World today. A good idea is to keep the post relatively short, a good aim is to have anywhere between 300-1000 words.

Photographs: Photographs can be included in the post as part of your blog. If they are not your own, you will need to ensure you advise the Environment Institute who took the pictures so that we can put this into the Blog post accordingly. You will need to ensure that you have permission to use the photographs that you send through.

Information Required: When you send through the completed blog post, the following information is also required:

- Full Name
- Short Biography (two or three sentences will do)
- Photograph of yourself (optional)
- A sentence which describes what your blog post is about. (This will be used to promote your post on Twitter/Facebook etc.)

Additional Information: Once the blog has been posted, the Environment Institute will inform you of any comments or questions that are made on your post and you will then be able to view the comment and respond accordingly as yourself.

Note: The Environment Institute have a clear policy (see policy) in regards to comments, we have the ability to block and delete comments at our discretion if comments break any of the rules outlined in the policy.

Submitting your post: To submit your post, simply attach the post as a word document to an email along with any photographs (clearly labelled) and the additional information required and send to environment@adelaide.edu.au.

The team at the Environment Institute will do the rest!
